

Hello everyone,

It has not been very long since I sent out the last newsletter, but it feels like the world has changed a lot and I feel the need to reach out. This is NOT a standard newsletter, and doesn't even focus on solar all that much.

I want to check in and see that all of my communities are okay during uncertain times. That is my main reason for reaching out today. If you have any needs that aren't being met right now, please make them known. These needs could be food, water, clothing, transportation, or just someone to talk to. Our mental and emotional health are just as important as our physical health as we face uncertain times.

The first priority for all of us needs to be making sure that nobody becomes isolated just because we are socially distancing.

If you have any needs that you are not able to meet, please do not be shy about making them known. No matter what we do for work, those of us who are connected to large networks should all be making sure people are taken care of first and foremost in these times.

All of that said, I do have a correction from my last newsletter. I stated that the Residential Renewable Energy Tax Credit would decrease to 21% in 2021. That was a mistake. The credit will, in fact, decrease to 22%. Thank you to the reader who caught that error and brought it to my attention.

Unfortunately, now it is time to notify you that the Spring Solar Celebration is being rescheduled. We are tentatively thinking about a date in June (Summer Solar Celebration, in that case) but we are not scheduling anything until the date gets closer and we see where things are at.

Now for something experimental and fun. I have put together a google document where we can share resources, ideas, etc. about solar energy in Wyoming. This may be messy and may not work out well, but I figured it is worth providing the link and seeing what happens.

Finally, if any of you have any resources you would like to see, please let me know. Your guidance helps to inform my work and makes my work more useful!

Stay safe out there, and reach out if you need ANYTHING!! I will do everything I can to help.

Thanks,

Hesid
